Plaintiffs LINDSAY PADILLA, ELIEZER PILOWSKY, and STEVEN WATTS (collectively, "Plaintiffs") bring this class action suit against CARRIER IQ, INC. ("CARRIER IQ" or "CIQ") and DOES 1 through 10, inclusive, (collectively "Defendants").

NATURE OF THE ACTION

- 1. Plaintiffs bring this class action suit on their own behalf and on behalf of all other owners of mobile devices containing the hidden Carrier IQ software ("Rootkit Software" or "Carrier IQ Software") nationwide, who were damaged as a result of the unauthorized privacy intrusion caused by operation of such software. This suit seeks to redress Defendant's interception of Plaintiffs' private data from their smartphone computing devices and storing such data on Defendant's servers without prior notification to or authorization by Plaintiffs.
- 2. Defendant's Rootkit Software is installed on numerous mobile devices nationwide including on information and belief the plaintiffs' mobile phones, and Defendant has failed to adequately inform or give notice to mobile phone owners including the Plaintiffs and proposed class regarding the presence of such Carrier IQ Software on mobile phones or function of the Rootkit Software or provide an opportunity to such consumers to provide consent to its implementation. As a result, without the knowledge or authorization of such consumers, including the plaintiffs and the proposed class, millions of users' private and sensitive data has been collected, transmitted to and stored by Defendant. In addition the Rootkit Software, on information and belief, is and has been consistently active on users smartphones including those of plaintiffs and the proposed class, using, without cell phone owner authorization, CPU cycles (reducing smartphone computer processor capacity), bandwidth, and storage space for which smartphone users' incurred damages and harm.
- 3. Andrew Coward, Carrier IQ's vice president for marketing, on information and belief, admitted that the company's Rootkit Software reports back amongst other things what consumer mobile phone applications are being used and what URLs or specific web pages are visited.
- 4. Rootkit Software manufactured by Defendant is installed on mobile devices, including, but not limited to, the "smartphone" cellular telephones of Plaintiffs LINDSAY PADILLA, ELIEZER PILOWSKY, and STEVEN WATTS, along with the mobile devices of numerous other smartphone owners including those in the proposed class.

5. Carrier IQ¹s Rootkit Software on information and belief, unlawfully violates the privacy of consumers by various means, including means not yet presently known, but including known wrongful methods that intercept mobile phone users' data, including private and sensitive data that contains personally identifiable information, web sites and specific pages visited such as those which reveal highly sensitive healthcare, financial, and sexual content associated with and tethered to consumers including the Plaintiffs and proposed class. Carrier IQ failed to obtain consumer notice and consent prior to installing the Rootkit Software or collecting and storing private data. Accordingly, Plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and proposed class seek damages and injunctive relief against Defendants including Carrier IQ to stop the wrongful conduct.

- 12. Defendant CARRIER IQ, INC., ("Carrier IQ" or "Defendant") is the provider of Rootkit Software installed in the mobile devices of Plaintiffs and was involved in the hidden installation of the Rootkit Software and interception of and storage of sensitive and private data without mobile phone users', including Plaintiffs and proposed class, notice and consent. Defendant is a Delaware corporation headquartered in the State of California at 1200 Villa Street, Suite 200, Mountain View, CA 94041. Carrier IQ conducts business throughout the State of California and the nation.
- 13. CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

- 15. Plaintiffs bring this action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2) and (b)(3) on behalf of themselves and the following class:
 - All persons or entities throughout the United States whose mobile devices contain or contained Carrier IQ software (the "Class").
- 16. The Class does not include Defendants or their officers, directors, or any entity in which Defendants hold a controlling interest.
- 17. Numerosity. The Class consists of at least hundreds of thousands of persons or entities, making joinder impracticable. CIQ has represented that its Carrier IQ Software is installed in over 140 million mobile devices.
- 18. Typicality. The claims of Plaintiffs are typical of the claims of all Class members.

 Plaintiffs and Class members were all subjected to Defendants' identical wrongful conduct based on the same transactions that occurred uniformly to the Class.
- 19. Adequacy. Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately represent and protect the interests of the Class. Plaintiffs have retained counsel with substantial experience in prosecuting class actions of this type. Plaintiffs and their counsel are committed to vigorously litigating this action, and have the resources to do so. Neither Plaintiffs nor their counsel have any interest adverse to those of the other members of the Class.
- 20. Superiority. Absent a class action, most members of the Class would find the cost of litigating their claims to be prohibitive and would have no effective remedy. The class-wide reatment of common questions of law or fact is also superior to multiple individual actions of piecemeal litigation in that it conserves the resources of the courts and the litigants, and promotes consistency and efficiently of adjudication.

- 21. Defendants have acted or failed to act on grounds generally applicable to Plaintiffs and all Class members, requiring the Court's imposition of uniform relief to ensure compatible standards of conduct toward the Class.
- 22. The factual and legal bases of Defendants' liability to all Class members are the same. All Class members have suffered harm as a result of Defendants' wrongdoing.
- 23. Commonality. There are many questions of law or fact common to the Class, and those questions predominate over any questions that may affect individual Class members.
 Common questions include but are not limited to the following:
- a. Whether Defendants owed a duty to the Class to give notice of the existence and operation of Defendants' software on Plaintiffs' mobile devices and whether Defendants breached such duty;
- b. Whether Defendants owed a duty to the Class to obtain authorization from owners and users of mobile devices to operate Defendants software on such devices for purposes of siphoning off information and transmitting and storing such information and whether Defendants breached such duty;
- c. Whether Defendants' conduct violated the California Consumer Protection Against Computer Spyware Act;
 - d. Whether Defendants' conduct violated the Electronic Communications Privacy Act;
 - e. Whether Defendants' conduct violated the Computer Fraud and Abuse Act;
- f. Whether Defendants' conduct was an invasion of privacy in violation of Article 1, Section 1 of the California Constitution;
 - g. Whether Defendants' conduct violated California Penal Code §§631 and 637.2;
 - h. Whether Defendants' conduct violated Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200;
 - i. Whether Plaintiffs and Class members have sustained damages, and if so, what is the proper measure of those damages and injunctive or equitable relief.

- 24. Questions of law and fact common to members of the Class predominate over any questions affecting only individual members, and a class action is superior to all other available methods for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy.
- 25. Injuries sustained by the Class flow from a common nucleus of operative facts. In each case where Defendants' software was installed on class members' mobile devices, class members were harmed when their keystroke and personal information was collected, transmitted and stored by Defendants without their knowledge, authorization or consent.
- 26. Class certification is appropriate under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a) and 23(b)(3). Class certification is also appropriate under Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2) with respect to the injunctive relief sought herein.
